Block Houses

I chose to centre my design on the children who require palliative care, as I did not think of that age group when I first thought of it. I think highlighting that children use palliative care too would be a wonderful way to use the banner. I chose children's building blocks to represent childhood and I chose to build houses to represent the idea of family, community and home.

The 11th Palliative Care Congress

Shapes

This design is inspired by the wide scope of people who receive palliative care, from young and old and varied conditions. I wanted to express that the people who receive palliative care are all individuals and it means something different to everyone. The different shapes and colours represent the different people who rely on this service.
